

Flexible resources for helping the NHS respond to COVID-19

We have been supporting the NHS for over a decade, and we want to reassure our clients that we are here to help alleviate any operational difficulties arising from the novel coronavirus.

Amidst the disruption to senior staffing caused by the COVID-19 outbreak, business continuity is absolutely critical at this time and we are here to help you plan how they will cover key leadership functions in the case of absence and business-as-usual disruption, but also with the additional strains that COVID-19 may place on your teams. This means having a shortlist of candidates ready for any eventuality.

Our NHS consultants have access to a large pool of professional, senior interims that are ready to step in and assist you from a few weeks to a period of several months.

How we can help

Short-term cover for executive absence

Having the confidence to bring in skilled executives to complement remaining and existing leadership teams will be key to bolster team and staff morale, maintain the delivery of normal service and ultimately, help to beat COVID-19.

Financial control and annual accounts

As the NHS is preparing to tackle its typical financial year end challenges, the disruption caused by the virus outbreak may stop you delivering your accounts on time. We have a number of year end consultants who are able to step in at short notice, and have the capability to work remotely during this time.

Clinical and medical strategy

Many staff will be looking to leaders for direction in this time of uncertainty and it will be key to have the strategic clinical experience at hand to deal with the strain that COVID-19 will put on our NHS. Having someone to act as a 'critical friend' during this time as an extra pair of hands and to give a second set of strategic and specialist eyes to problems as they arise.

Business continuity & operational risk planning

Planning for business continuity and risk mitigation is absolutely critical in seeing your organisation through. It might be worth investing in short-term specialists with these key skills in scenario and risk planning to expertly advise on appropriate measures for your organisation.

Get in touch

We can have a shortlist of leaders for you to review in a matter of hours.

The right interim can be retained and begin engaging with your organisation within days.
